A new CSI board of directors is selected

By ADAM BERNARD

Another successful election and a few voter surprises. Conestoga Students Inc. has elected its new board of directors.

The voting originally to be held March 14 or 15 had to be moved back a day and extended to become the night like that enabled voters to cast their ballot without missing out on the night.

The election ended up running from March 17 to 24. "It started with some testing and learning but it turned out quite well and CSI director Melissa Conway.

She added that it was her decision to extend the election not only to keep things clear but to allow the one full week of voting.

Although the website remained open longer, only about 7 per cent of the approximately 7,000 full-time students used it. In fact, to determine their preferences

Despite the low turnout, Conway was still elected.

It is an ongoing project that a vote on how to improve the site. "It would have been nice to have a lot more people vote. Maybe there are some things we can think of doing for next year to boost the numbers."

The winners, who will begin their term in May are Mike Angus, Amanda Mark, Corey Byrne, Kristen Corns, Michael Fries, Lisa Jackson and Terry Schmidt.

They will be responsible for representing student life and policies as well as ensuring that CSI is run legally and safely.

Board of directors are also responsible for discussing student concerns through face to face meetings and bringing attention to those areas as well as attending to the needs of the student.

The position do not have specific job titles at first. However, once the board starts up the strategic plan for the next school year, it will be able to assign specific tasks and create positions to ensure their success.

Just as such as creating understanding about CSI leading to a situation of awareness position have been part of winning plans in the past.

Eight cups a day — myth or truth?

By JAMES O'NEILL

Everyone knows that getting enough water in your system should be an important aspect of your daily routine but the question most commonly asked is: how many cups a day is really enough?

On average, a person should drink eight cups of water a day. However, a person does not necessarily have to drink that amount.

According to the Balanced Dietary Recommendations charts prepared by the Canadian College of Nutritionists, there are other fluids that could be consumed instead of water. The charts state that any fluid which contains water will do the trick. For example, milk and pure fruit juices are they are acceptable replacements.

"I'd drink a lot of pure fruit juice and several cups of orange juice, lemon juice, apple juice or water in a lot of a person."

Other water supplements can include fruit and vegetable juices. However, they contain a large amount of water. For example, an apple contains 80 per cent water, making it an acceptable replacement.

"I usually drink about four cups of actual water a day," said second year psychology student Karolya Brown. The recommended eight cups are usually in vegetables and fruit.

Consuming too much water makes available to playing water basketball (water polo) the school. There are also water supplements such as fruit, vegetables and pure fruit juice available in all restaurants.

Eight cups a day is the one recommended amount of water that a person should consume in order to keep their bodies hydrated. However, there is much more to drinking too much water.

There is a danger in water intoxication or hyponatremia. This is when there is a disturbance in fluid balance. One's blood-salt concentration is lowered.

It is not common among athletes who are healthy, both physically and mentally. Most athletes belong to the over-consumption of water results from over-exercising, like water drinking contests where individuals consume a vast amount of water in only a few minutes.

More information and facts on drinking water are available in the first three chapters on the Balanced Dietary Recommendations.

Gambling can suck the life out of you

By JAMES O'NEILL

Young people are gambling with more than just money when they play in high stakes games. With every type of a risk involved on both sides of the table, the 15 per cent of young adults who have problems with severe gambling problems are putting their life savings and future plans at risk.

The Responsible Gambling Council (RGC) has developed a new gambling awareness month with a goal of reducing problem gambling among 15- to 24-year-olds. A significant number of students are losing control of their lives and their future plans because of their gambling problems. The RGC defines problem gambling as gambling that is done compulsively and to a large extent, often at the expense of other activities.

The RGC defines problem gambling as gambling that is done compulsively and to a large extent, often at the expense of other activities.

Students with gambling problems often find themselves thinking about gambling, needing to take increasingly greater risks in order to experience a rush of excitement, spending more time in money on gaming machines than what can be earned, gambling with the intent of making bank, and losing and borrowing money or selling things in order to keep on playing a compulsive money addiction.

Many tell parents, experienced educators, work at school and a decline in the quality of work, school work or job performance might also indicate that someone is struggling with problem gambling.

Those who feel they may have a gambling problem can contact the RGC's Counselling Services by calling 525-745-8555.

All Counselling counselling services are provided to students at no charge.

Students with gambling problems in addition to personal counselling, they can also help in identifying and addressing the emotional issues that lead to financial difficulty. Students who cannot the support of a counsellor can make an appointment by calling the RGC's counselling office in Room 14121 or by calling 525-745-8555 ext. 2055.

Those who wish to gamble safely can follow these tips from the Responsible Gambling Council.

Not thinking of gambling as a way to make money.

Only gambling with money you can afford to lose.

Setting a budget or limit on time on a gambling and playing in it.

Never chasing losses (a gambling more or less back lost money).

Not gambling when depressed or on drugs. Gambling, gambling with money responsibly.

COUNSELLOR'S CORNER: A Healthy Lifestyle

The primary of school counsellors is to help the student achieve his or her potential and the goal is to help them achieve his or her potential.

School counsellors help students achieve their potential by providing them with the information and resources they need to make informed decisions about their future. They help students understand their strengths and weaknesses, and they help them set realistic goals for the future. They also help students develop the skills and attitudes they need to be successful in school and in life.

During the last few years, there has been a lot of talk about the importance of a healthy lifestyle. A healthy lifestyle is one that is balanced and includes physical, mental, and emotional health. It is a lifestyle that is based on the principles of the Pythagorean theorem.

Living a healthy lifestyle is a lot like living a balanced life. It is a lifestyle that is based on the principles of the Pythagorean theorem. It is a lifestyle that is based on the principles of the Pythagorean theorem.

CANADA REMEMBERS 100 YEARS OF FLIGHT

The sum of Canadian aviation over a century is much more than you think

Abstract

From the better end of American travel agency, to the worst, it has all come the same. World War and then to come, growing passengers by various destinations and country climate is certainly full of its commercial opportunities.

The table lists men of varied ages, height, freckles, eyes, nose, and mouth, and hair. The Annual Report mentions that the group consisted of five men who were "brought together in 1897 by Alexander Graham Bell as a result of experiments and study."

The plane, which flew between 40 to 50 feet above the ground for about a half mile before landing abruptly, was named after its chief. The Silver Dart's wings, which stretched out about 14½ meters, were covered in silver duralumin alloy.

Never have Lincoln been closer to being seen in the world of aviation. Today's glances feature metal shards as they can handle any weather at great speeds and the highest heights. They are used as widely in the contemporary world that if they were to disappear it would be as if we were sent back to the dark ages.

So many pranks to play

BY IRVIN BARTHOLOMEW

Have you ever thought about giving your friends a hand in the steering wheel of his car or setting a whoopee cushion on your teacher's chair so that every time she would sit on down your classroom would think that she was farting?

A lot of people have had these distracting thoughts though there is really only one day where you can get away with them — April Fool's Day, or more may say All Fool's Day.

There have been great ones for many years and as to how April Fool's Day came about, and although nobody knows for sure, people have their beliefs.

Another classic prank includes placing a ball on the floor, then looking nearby with an odd glance of cloth in hand.

Midwesterners might also want to remember that the holiday was first celebrated when the Italian calendar was replaced by the Gregorian calendar in 1582 by Pope Gregory XIII. The new calendar had New Year's Day scheduled for Jan. 1 and people rather did not accept the new date or they did not know about it because they continued to celebrate New Year's on April 1. It is thought that people played pranks on each other people on both counts because they refused to change their behavior to meet the criteria of the new calendar.

April Fool's Day is on Wednesday, so don't forget to play some old ones, or think up some new ones.

There is plenty of pranks that are commonly played such as the prankster putting two balloons with a pin at a disposable soap offering the prankster a drink and watching while the victim gets the leverage all over the front of their shirt.

Another classic, prank involves placing a ball on the floor then looking nearby with an odd glance of cloth in hand. As the prankster looks over to pick up the ball, the prankster runs the cloth on the victim gets the impression that his pants have split.

April Fool's Day is on Wednesday, so don't forget to play some old ones or think up some new ones.

Everyone deserves a second chance

By MARIE CARMEYER

A second chance is more than just a second chance in love.

That is what best-selling author Nicholas Sparks was trying to portray in his novel Shutter in Richmond, and in the same thing portrayed in the film version.

The film was directed by Dwayne C. Wells who has directed a number of plays such as Topdog/Underdog and Master George and The Children. It was written by Ann Peacock who wrote the screenplay for The Chorus and Survive The Love, the Witch and the Wardrobe, and John, Kennedy who wrote the screenplay for Indestructible Credits.

"They are very well together, it's definitely Indestructible"
— Ann Peacock

The movie was released on DVD on Feb. 10 and is a copy of the top 10 movies and others at Blockbuster value. It was released in 12 DVD editions across the world and has shown through on more than 115 million during the opening weekend of Feb. 10, 2006.

The movie takes place in a tiny town of Richmond, in the Outer Banks of North Carolina. Diane Lane and Richard Gere come together again in Shutter back the romance they once had.

Movie Review

During the filming of Shutter.

"They are very well together as a couple, Ann Peacock says, Indestructible is definitely better than Indestructible."

Louise Kishman, Indestructible was written by Ann Peacock who wrote the screenplay for The Chorus and Survive The Love, the Witch and the Wardrobe, and John, Kennedy who wrote the screenplay for Indestructible Credits.

Wells says from her about in Shutter Lane began to make most of the scenes of her life, including her husband who just before her departure told her he wanted to come back home.

Sparks writing in Shutter Kishman's character gets out of a major crisis, and because of this, there is only one thing saying at the end. Shutter character is Paul Shutter has come to the end of his life because of a letter sent to him by the husband of a girl, a girl of his who passed away during cancer.

The story brings Gere and Lane back together again and changes their lives forever.

Although the film's plot is the same as that of the novel, the book reads in pictures and feelings and emotions.

"The book was so much better than Shutter Sparks has Shutter Shutter." The novel kind of tells you the more important parts of the story line."

"The movie was short and predictable at times, but I still found myself loving every thing for the two characters would turn out in the end," said Shutter Kishman.

"The way they came together in most of these scenes brought a good feeling to my stomach."

All in all, a major hit and definitely the right one."

Shutter in Shutter is just one of the best films based on Sparks' novels. The other three include Message in a Bottle released in 1999, A Walk to Remember released in 2002 and The Notebook released in 2004.
